

Always You

Before I dream may I hope for you.

Before I long may I reach for you.

Before I judge may I listen to you.

Before I rush may I rest with you.

Before I shout may I call on you.

Before I doubt may I hear from you.

Before I brag may I point to you.

Before I fear may I trust in you.

Before I act may I remember you . . .

So that in these things, in all I do,

It is not me that is first, but always you.
