Talk Takeaways

- Every creature in creation has a relationship with what is directly below it and what is directly above it.
- Every creature at its center is brought into creation with an innate desire to seek out the initial cause of that desire.
- "The central urge in every atom, to return to its divine source and origin." -- Walt Whitman
- There is no such thing as static spirituality. You are either working and rising, or you are thinking and sinking.
- "We shall not cease from exploration, and the end of all our exploring will be to arrive where we started, and to know that place for the first time." -- T. S. Eliot

- The mind looks to itself to find clarity when the mind itself is the source of the confusion.
- We do not attain spiritual knowledge. We grow into spiritual knowledge while at the same time outgrowing who and what we have been.
- Everything in creation is like a seed, being acted upon and undergoing a process of transformation. Everything is always being given what it needs to transcend its present form.
- Everything that it is possible for a seed to become is already built into the seed. But the seed must be nourished in order to grow into its intended possibilities.
- Become aware of the conflict in yourself instead of looking for something outside of yourself to blame the conflict on.
- "The important thing is this: To be able at any moment to sacrifice that which we are for what we could become." -- Charles Du Bos
- Every moment is exactly what we need to outgrow what we have been and grow into what we are to be.
