Pull Yourself Out of the Unseen Prison of Thought

Key Lesson: Those who seek immortality for their own sake slowly die in time; but those who dare to throw off the shackles of time enter into the Everlasting Light.

Talk Takeaways

- Part of the authentic journey is the gradual realization that there is something in you that never stops hungering and thirsting after new impressions.
- When we wake up in the morning and begin the new day looking at life through the conclusions that thought has already made, then we are looking at yesterday's news.
- We as human beings are created with the desire to belong to something greater than ourselves. Everything in creation belongs to something greater than itself.
- We resist many things that happen to us because it doesn't fit the agenda that thought says should be taking place.

- The mind that is constantly comparing the present moment to the content of past memory cannot take in new impressions.
- It is the revelation and realization of my limitations that opens the door to my possibilities.
- Your pursuit of comfort and security is the source of your anxiety.
- You don't really fear the unknown. What you really fear is not knowing what to do in order to confirm your identity.
- The Hero's Journey is from one level of consciousness to another, into the unity of the wholeness and holiness of Life itself.
- Identification with thought cuts us off from the natural refreshing nourishment that is freely given each split second to the individual who is aware of the need.
- All identification with thought does is sustain an identity that was born out of identification with thought in the first place.
- The awareness of, the witnessing of thought is the gradual dismantling of the identity built-up by identification with thought.
- Justice is perfect action in the soul that is ready to see itself. Your experience of the moment is always perfect justice that is the outcome of what your mind is attending to.
- "The man himself must become other than he was if he wants to comprehend truth — must become as true as truth itself." -- Max Stirner
- Don't try to be strong. Instead, watch and observe where you are about to act from weakness.
