A Powerful Revelation to Help You Release Painful Negative Reactions

Key Lesson: The only thing (in life) that goes from zero to a million miles per hour - in a single painful movement - are negative reactions; they are the unseen source of all self-compromising choices, driven on by an almost limitless dark kind of "anti-matter" called unconscious resistance.

Talk Takeaways

- The more that you participate in a dark interior dialogue, the darker it becomes.
- Anything that says you have a right to be negative is set upon the destruction of our soul.
- You are never going to think your way out of a negative reaction. The more you think about why you are negative, the more negative you become.
- Creation never stops completing itself through the relationships of everything within the creation.
- The human race is set against itself because nobody knows what to do with negative reactions.
- The greatest illusion on Earth is that it is possible to complete yourself. There is no greater illusion or pain.

- Every time you have a negative reaction, you always do what the negative reaction tells you to do.
- In the world of passing time, the revelation of creation is never finished.
- The moment that you want to get past any moment before it is finished, you are in the dark of a consciousness that doesn't know what it does to itself or others.
- Real faith is built whenever you witness a negative reaction instead of being carried away by it, understanding to some degree that it has already been finished.
- Negative reactions claim that blaming something for the way you feel will change the way you feel for the better.
- The remains of reactions linger on past their appointed time within the consciousness that is not aware of those reactions.
- The original reaction that comes out of a disturbance initially has no name. Then a part of us names the reaction by not wanting it based on an image of what should happen.
- The reaction itself is no separate from what it blames for its appearance. It's not outside of the moment in which it appears. You cannot separate a reaction from the moment that it is reacting to.
- No reaction understands the purpose of its appearance.
- Every initial, natural reaction is resolved and fulfilled within the same condition that created it. The reaction to the reaction is an attempted misdirection of attention to something outside of the condition, which is imagination/illusion.
- Revelation is participation in the perfection of creation.
- The thinker is always separate from what it is thinking about. Awareness is not separate from all that is in that field of awareness, and it is the unifier of thinker and thought as one thing.
