

Step Onto the Pathless Path

*A*s the sleeping mind—driven on as it is by unconscious desires—awakens to see that the only thing thought can do is make circles, it slowly stops seeking. The divine longing of the heart to know unconditional love remains, but the old “action” of trying to think one’s way out of pain, or into some imagined “paradise,” begins to fall away.

As grows the light of this new understanding, the veils of self-ignorance part by themselves to reveal an unthinkable Truth:

There is nowhere to go, only something to be. And Being takes no time, because it is timeless...

...Which means there is no path for us to seek, find, and then walk because one’s eyes have at least been opened to see that Life itself—in its eternal act of revealing itself—to itself—is the true “pathless path” because...no one walks it.

— Guy Finley