A Prayer for Love Rarely Asked, But Always Answered

Key Lesson #1: No seed - whether a kernel of corn, or a special talent - can prove itself any more valuable than the sweat it takes to sow, cultivate, and nourish it until it offers up its latent Good. In much the same way, the soul is a seed; relationships are its ground; and what grows when all is properly cared for...is unconditional Love.

Key Lesson #2: Nature is not a collection of disparate things. It is all part of an unseen circulation: a divine communion of a timeless intelligence creating, discovering, and realizing itself.

Key Lesson #3: The awakened heart feels more than emotion. An undivided mind sees more than thought. A sensitive body is touched by more than just its own sensations. Beneath appearances, there is only relationship. Only connection. Only awareness.

Key Lesson #4: Here is a great spiritual paradox: none can hope to know the truth of their Divine Individuality until they have realized their all-inclusive similarity with everyone they meet.

Talk Takeaways

- We would not be interested in true interior Work unless somehow, on a daily basis, we lived with an unrequited Love. The capacity to know this Love is already seeded within us.
- The consciousness that we call "Christ" is the light that dwells within the darkness that the darkness cannot comprehend. The Christ is a living awareness.
- The mind is hungry, in the wrong way, to come to a conclusion in order to confirm the sense of self that believes it knows the truth.
- Unconditional love is not an emotion. It is the experience of realizing that the observer is the observed, an infinite capacity to realize perfect similarity.
- The moment itself is a being. It is the movement of a Celestial circulation. Every moment contains within it the capacity for us to be in relationship with it, where there is no separation between the observer and the observed.
- Every act you take to feel superior is proof of just how inferior your understanding is. You cannot judge something without feeling superior to what is being judged.
- Any time there is judgment there is conflict in the soul.
- Every cell in the body has an assigned duty and is in perfect relationship with what is around it. Creation itself is built upon relationship.
- Who you really are is a communion of a timeless intelligence creating, discovering, and realizing itself.
- We think we know what must unfold in order to be free. Whereas real freedom is relationship with the unfolding itself.
- It is not necessary to "believe" in truth, in kindness, in love. These things already exist, along with the awareness of their qualities.
- The Good Samaritan was on his way somewhere, but he stopped because he could see what the others could not see. The Good Samaritan was aware of the pain in the other person because he was aware of the pain in himself; he could see a former, or perhaps a future version of himself.

- We will usually only open our door to others who give us something that we want. Whereas awareness has its door open to everything.
- Resistance to WHAT IS creates the illusion of a "me" that knows why the moment should be other than it is.
- "Please God, show me what I might do for the sake of a greater good, and lend me the strength to shoulder what I'm asked to endure, that I may complete this moment as you would see it done." And then wait for it so that you understand a sacrifice is required in order to reconcile that moment, because it requires you realizing perfect similarity with something that you have denied is inside of you.
- Instead of judging yourself, wait for the understanding of yourself, which includes watching the resistance, the part of you that does not want to wait. The resistance is part of the revelation.
