Let Love Lead You into a World Where Fear, Anger, and Frustration Can't Dwell

Key Lesson: There is no greater power for healing than the love of what is True; by its light we see and discover that every moment of our life bears a message just for us, and that if we will attend to that lesson, as honestly as we can, we are that much freer than the moment before. Persist with your wish to know the truth of yourself; use everything, and everything will serve your wish.

Talk Takeaways

- Most human beings believe that they already know what love is, as well as what it means to be loved.
- To discover what love is begins with seeing what it is not.
- "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity (Agape), I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away. When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things. For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known. And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." -- New Testament, 1 Corinthians 13

- We believe that power is found in the part. It is that very belief that is the pain.
- The genuine road to love is arduous. Love asks you for everything, but it gives you everything that it asks for.
- The more that we don't want something, the more we experience what we don't want.
- Human beings are more interested in keeping their sense of self in place than they are interested in discovering the truth about it.
- When you are negative, it is because you don't want to see anything that doesn't look, walk, talk, or act like you. What chance is there for love if there is a demand that everything that you see must look like you?
- "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other." -- New Testament -- The two masters are what you want and what you don't want, which always appear together.
- Here is a question that will never occur to the vast majority of humanity: When does wanting and not-wanting come to an end? Wanting and not-wanting come to an end when we finally see that they will never be the solution to our suffering.

- When you seem to get life to do what you want, at that same moment appears what you don't want. For every want there is a not-want. There can't be love where any opposite dominates the consciousness.
- The mind is never where it is because it is always trying to get to where it thinks it needs to be.
- You can never get away from the experience of yourself, but you believe that you can by wanting something new
- Judging yourself is the same as not wanting the experience of yourself.
- Our new want must be to willingly see what painful reactions are revealing to us, as opposed to seeing only what those reactions are pointing to. Want the revelation more than you want to save yourself again.
